A Concert to Benefit Autism Speaks

HOSTED BY KELLI O'HARA

JUNE 24TH 2019

Gershwin Theatre

New York City

A WORD FROM THE PRODUCERS

We are so pleased to be at the Gershwin Theatre with all of you tonight for the fourth annual Arts for Autism Concert. It's wonderful to see familiar faces from previous years and to have so many new people with us, too. Whether it's your first time or not, the evening is always filled with "firsts" for so many here. Every year more than 150 students from across the country step onto the Gershwin stage to perform on Broadway for the first time. They are joined by a featured young artist on the spectrum who also make their first appearance on Broadway. For some of you, the show also provides a "first" glimpse of what it means to have autism.

As the event has grown over the years, its impact and reach have expanded. In addition to raising more money we continue to share people's stories, increase awareness and encourage acceptance; casting a wider net with each show. The show's reach extends beyond the audience to include each student performer, their families, guest speakers, the Broadway performers and our entire behind-the-scenes crew. It continues to extend to each person that they share their story with after the show.

In past years, we have dedicated the show to parents and siblings of people on the spectrum. This year we dedicate the show to the care-givers and teachers who support them. Once again we have a blockbuster Broadway cast ready to bring the house down along with added energy and excitement of more than 185 talented students joining them on stage!

After our "first" show, we didn't think we would ever be able to top it. We didn't think we would ever feel the same level of excitement and emotion. We were wrong. We are delighted to be here once again to share in your excitement, to see the laughter, to see the tears and to talk to all of you about your "first" Arts for Autism.
